

Company: Keybridge Research LLC
Position Title: Economist / Senior Economist
Location: Washington D.C.
Start Date: Immediately

Company Description

Keybridge Research LLC is an international economics and public policy consulting firm. Keybridge provides analytical support and strategic advice to a select clientele that includes Fortune 500 companies, global financial firms, G-7 governments, premier industry associations, and non-profit organizations. Our experience and expertise make us uniquely suited to assist organizations that frequently operate at the interface of business, economics, and public policy.

Founded in 2011 by Dr. Robert F. Wescott, Keybridge's mission is to provide balanced, credible, and timely technical analysis and strategic insights that inform business decisions and drive public policy debates. Our dedication to the principles of sound analysis, clear communication, and unmatched client service guide our work and serve as the foundation of our success.

Keybridge's senior staff is comprised of experts with distinguished academic credentials and extensive experience in areas of economic and public policy. On a day-to-day basis, Keybridge principals work closely with clients to develop strategy and conduct timely analysis. For longer-term projects and highly specialized topics, the firm leverages its network of advisers-including Nobel Prize-winning economists and world-class experts in the fields of econometrics, energy, and finance – to build project teams tailored to the client's unique needs.

Keybridge provides clients with access to a full suite of analytical services, including macroeconomic risk assessments, econometric modeling studies, policy impact studies, qualitative policy evaluations, and survey design and analysis. For clients requiring regular consultations, Keybridge offers on-going strategic advisory services in the areas of macroeconomic trends and risks, international trade and finance, and energy and environmental economics. Keybridge also assembles and manages inter-disciplinary teams of experts to conduct thought leadership projects to assist clients with building competitive advantages or reforming policy debates through the development, sharing, and application of innovative ideas. Keybridge's principals are regularly asked to present research and share insights with economic, financial, and policy audiences around the world, including corporate strategic planning committees, congressional committees, and international conferences.

Position Description

The economist will contribute to the entire project development process. In particular, the economist will be responsible for the following tasks:

- Participating in brainstorming sessions with clients to identify research needs.
- Identifying data requirements and advising on the best analytical approaches.

-
- Assisting project leaders with the formulation of comprehensive and realistic project plans.
  - Conducting preliminary background research and literature reviews.
  - Collecting and organizing data.
  - Performing economic and public policy analysis.
  - Translating analytical results into easily understood presentations and well-written studies, including supporting tables and graphs.
  - Working closely with clients and project leaders to refine analysis and deliverables.
  - Managing junior staff and delegating tasks to research assistants.
  - Training research assistants in analytical methods and frameworks.

More generally, the economist will frequently be required to exercise good problem-solving skills and effectively apply economic concepts and models to real-world problems. A successful individual will be able to work simultaneously and independently in multiple areas of research, quickly learning new topics or methods as needed. As a young company with an entrepreneurial spirit, Keybridge seeks motivated candidates that are interested in positions with rapidly expanding responsibility and long-term career prospects.

QUALIFICATIONS & SELECTION CRITERIA

The ideal candidate will possess:

- Advanced degree in economics, public policy, or related field.
- Minimum two years work experience in economic research or public policy analysis.
- Strong interest in economics and the application of economic tools to public policy.
- Demonstrated quantitative skills, including knowledge of statistics and econometrics.
- Demonstrated publication-level writing experience.
- Proven capacity to work simultaneously on a variety of issues, independently adjusting to changing priorities and achieving results with agreed upon objectives and deadlines.
- Strong interpersonal and communication skills, with the proven ability to work effectively within project teams and directly interact with clients.
- Exceptional work ethic and good sense of humor.

Current areas of interest to our clients include: macroeconomics, energy economics, environmental economics, saving and retirement issues, international financial issues, and global economic risks.

Compensation

Keybridge offers competitive compensation packages that include:

-
- Base salary commensurate with job responsibilities, education, and experience.
  - Annual bonuses based on individual and company performance.
  - Full health and dental insurance.
  - Matched retirement savings accounts.

To Apply

Please submit a brief cover letter, resume, and writing sample to Ms. Allix Bradecamp at abradecamp@keybridgeresearch.com.